Gabriela Preciado from the Inland Empire Resource Conservation District (IERCD) provided an update on the Agency's education and outreach efforts, reporting that 105 programs were delivered—well above the initial projection of 66—reaching over 2,000 students across all five service divisions. The increase was driven by strong teacher engagement and repeat requests. IERCD also participated in five community events and hosted four conservation workshops. Program improvements included pre-program materials, branded presentations, and post-program surveys, which reflected high satisfaction and interest in continued participation.

Ms. Preciado also discussed upcoming outreach efforts, including a June 17 workshop in Beaumont in partnership with the UC Master Gardeners. Plans are underway to introduce hybrid workshop formats to improve accessibility and participation. Additionally, IERCD is coordinating with school districts to ensure timely submission of insurance documentation for the upcoming academic year.

General Manager Eckhart and committee members expressed support for a multi-year professional services agreement with IERCD. A proposed three-year agreement with two optional extensions would solidify the Agency's long-term investment in water education and community engagement. The Committee affirmed its continued support for IERCD's work and anticipates bringing the contract forward for future Board consideration.

Director Wargo commended the effectiveness of IERCD's program delivery and expressed gratitude for their outreach and classroom engagement. Director Valdivia echoed the appreciation and underscored the importance of continued investment in education and conservation.

IERCD-Developed Strategic Messaging: Cherry Festival

Elevator Pitch (30 seconds)

“We’re the San Geronio Pass Water Agency, and our job is to make sure there’s enough water here today and for the future. Most of our local supply comes from underground, but that groundwater doesn’t refill fast enough on its own. So we bring in water from Northern California to help recharge our local basins. It’s a huge job involving tunnels, pumps, and smart storage like the Sites Reservoir. Want to know how it all works?”

Deeper Engagement (1-2 minutes)

“We rely on groundwater for most of our water here in the Pass Area. Every time you wash your hands or fill a glass, that’s likely groundwater. The challenge is that it doesn’t naturally refill fast enough to keep up with demand. That’s where we come in. SGPWA imports water from Northern California through the State Water Project to replenish our local supply (a process called recharge). Without this imported water, some of our wells could literally run dry. We’re investing in the future through projects like the Sites Reservoir to store water from big storms, and the Delta Conveyance project to modernize the infrastructure that brings water south. We’re planning for drought, climate change, and earthquakes so you don’t have to worry every time you turn on the tap.”

Really Into It

Sites Reservoir: CA’s Rainy Day Fund

What it is:
Sites Reservoir is a proposed off-stream reservoir in Northern California that would capture and store excess water during big storms (not snowmelt, but actual storm runoff) so it can be saved for dry years.
